

Japanese Culture and Society: Social and Cultural psychology Tutor: Akinobu NAMEDA, Ph.D.

Course description:

This course explores Japanese society and culture by looking at theories and experiencing research in social and cultural psychology. This course is divided into two parts. The first part of this course focuses on culture. We will discuss theories and research findings on culture in psychology as well as cultural phenomena in Japan. For the second part of this course, we will consider and discuss social issues in Japanese context: work-life balance, family work, career development, and so on. In addition to participation in classroom lectures and discussions, students in this course will conduct some research projects on culture and social issues in Japan that will help to have views to understand Japanese culture and society.

Course objectives:

- Students can obtain their understanding of culture and social issues in Japan.
- Students can make discussions on Japanese culture and society, based on knowledge and research in social and cultural psychology, and/or other academic fields in social sciences.
- Students can reflect on their own culture and society in looking at culture and social issues in Japanese context.
